

ABOUT The Faculty

University of Kurdistan's Faculty of Language and Literature officially started its educational and research activities as an independent faculty in October 2012, after separating from the Faculty of Literature and Humanities. In a short period of time, this faculty has been able to take a huge step in improving the educational and research indicators of University of Kurdistan by founding new programs and employing faculty members. The faculty currently has 34 full time academic staff, including 2 professors, 7 associate professors and 25 assistant professors. The Faculty of Language and Literature currently includes 4 departments that together offer 12 different programs: Students can apply for the BA program in Kurdish Language and Literature, BA, MA, and PhD programs in Arabic Language and Literature, and BA, MA, and PhD programs in Persian Language and Literature. The Department of English Language and Literature offers BA and MA programs in three different fields: English Language and Literature, TEFL and General Linguistics.

This faculty has a Persian Language Teaching Center for non-Persian speakers, which is responsible for holding Persian language courses for foreign students.
